

LOBULAR BREAST CANCER AWARENESS DAY SOCIAL

Invasive lobular carcinoma (ILC), also known as lobular breast cancer, is the 2nd most common type of breast cancer. It makes up 15% of all breast cancer diagnoses and the sixth most frequently diagnosed cancer of women in the US. Navigating such a diagnosis can be daunting, however you are not alone. Meet others living with ILC, share experiences, and access helpful resources and support on Global Lobular Breast Cancer Awareness Day.

Light lunch will be provided.

Host: Janet Lapins, Lobular Breast Cancer Advocate

Janet Lapins has been a dedicated healthcare and community advocate for more than 40 years. Inspired by her experience as a multiple cancer survivor, she became a passionate advocate for patients with invasive lobular carcinoma (ILC). Her research and commitment led her to join the Lobular Breast Cancer Alliance (LBCA) and serve on the Los Robles Hospital Cancer Community Advisory Board. Today, Janet focuses on raising awareness, advancing research, and empowering ILC patients through education, advocacy, and support.
